Policeman Albert W. Thayer Dies on

Duty. Albert W. Thayer, a Detrail policeman, washed about 10 o'clock the other even-ing, while on duty on Fort Street west, near Tweifth Street. People living in the near Tweifth Street. People living in the vigitity heard three shots fired, and rushed to the spot whence the sound came, only to find the policeman weitering in his blood. Officers were atonce summoned, and a physician, who examined the wound and found that the ball had entered the head at the base of the left car and passed clear through the head, coming out half an inch forward of the right our above the cheek hour. of the right ear above the cheek bone.

A thorough search of Thayer's person de-veloped the fact that his revolver was miss-ing. His gloves were in his pocket, showing that his hands were ready for action, and his club lay by his side with the strap sround his wrist. The detectives at once began a thorough investigation. Between the sidewalk in front of Clement Lafferty s and Renjamin F. Sutton's houses and the fence were a quantity of dead loaves, covered with the light snow which fed in the early part of light snow which fed in the early part of the evening. Through the leaves, with the sid of a lantern, the detectives easily traced the fo alriest of three men. The leaves were scattered and the prints somewhat slarred as it made while running. They were glaced to the corner of Larayette avence, where they seemed to halt and then turn abruptly to the right.

When the detectives reached the corner, upon throwing the light of the lantern over the fence they discovered a yetlow leather satchel, apparently new. This being taken to the light and examined was found to con-to the light and examined was found to con-tain a nimiller satchel, several colls of fuse, a sinkt dark lautern, several finety tem-pered arilis, two penches, two large jimmies, two packages of dynamite, a pair of high nippers and several other articles be-fouring to a kit of burglars tools. Among the articles was a large cloth bag used to the articles was a large cloth bag used to hold stolen silverware, an old cap and some chilars and cuffs. The baggage master at the Wabash depot, foot of Twellth street, says that about 10:20 o clock local time, a few minutes after the shooting occurred, he apticed four men hanging around the depot who attempted to board the outbound train as it was leaving the depot, but who, finding they were discovered, jumped from the train and disappeared among the freight train and disappeared among the freight

As Thayer was killed two and a half As Thayer was killed two and a half blocks away from his beat, the theory of the police is that he saw some crooks acting in a suspicious manner, and following, surprised them as they were about to undertake a job, when they turned upon him and shot him dead. Thayer's left car being blackened with powder loads to the supposition that they surrounded him, and one of them placing a revolver close to his head fired the fatal shot.

Michigan Monuments at Gettysburg. Col. George G. Hriegs, chairman of the Michigan Gettysburg monument commis-Michigan Getrysburg monument commission, says he is very well pleased with the work of the monument contractors that has already been placed in position upon the field. With the various battle avenues that are being laid out through the now national park, the vast number of monuments erected by the states, and the improvements of the landscape gardener, Col. Briggs says Gettysburg is fast becoming one of the most attractive of the national and historical resorts.

The changing of the stakes originally set for the Michigan envalry brigade monument, owing to the laying out of an avenue, has not affected the focation of the brigade during the conflict, while it has given the monument a much more prominent position and brought it nearer to a public driveway.
